

A Global Leader in Hydrogen Development Investments

Areas of Focus

Renewable Energy

Whether it's promoting hydrogen-supportive policies, resolving regulatory challenges or structuring transactions, Bracewell is strongly positioned to advise clients on issues related to hydrogen development investments.

Our hydrogen energy lawyers are at the forefront of the federal policies and regulatory developments driving the hydrogen economy. They leverage their relationships with key federal agencies, congressional committees, and the White House to help clients navigate the legal and regulatory issues associated with hydrogen projects and initiatives.

As a case in point, our government relations team represented Air Liquide in educating policymakers and creating opportunities to use hydrogen to modernize the electric grid and mobility sector. These efforts resulted in several pieces of legislation promoting the use of hydrogen in production, energy storage and transportation.
