What's the big energy talk at the 2024 Republican National Convention?

Jeremy Harrell, the new CEO at ClearPath, talks with Frank Maisano, senior principal in Bracewell's Policy Resolution Group, on the convention floor in Milwaukee.

Transcript:

ClearPath's really excited to be here in Milwaukee, talking about Republican leadership at the federal, state and local level on energy policy that is affordable, reliable and lower emissions. Really excited about the clean energy momentum in this country over the last decade, and Republicans are leaning in on these issues because we know we've got rational, limited government, free market solutions that are good for the environment, good for energy security and good for the economy. Really excited to talk more with industry leaders, with policymakers who are running on a strong platform here in this cycle on clean energy and climate, and really excited to see the next steps as Republicans continue to push on this issue and try to deliver big policy wins.
