Frank Maisano, a senior principal in Bracewell's Policy Resolution Group, explained to Heatmap that investments in Republican-controlled states through the Inflation Reduction Act has increased support for the IRA and renewables.

"Businesses will support many things that they have their tentacles into, and Republicans will support many things that are going on in their districts that constituents like."

"The reality is, if you're going to try to repeal it," Maisano added, "you're going to have to do it through Congress and a lot of the action in the energy transition is in Republican districts. It becomes a constituent issue."
