Brian Rogers advises private debt funds, banks and other financial institutions, commodity merchants, private equity funds, family offices, and public and private companies in a variety of debt financing transactions in all levels of the capital structure, including term loans, asset-based loans, unitranche, intermediations, monetizations, prepayments, trade finance, leveraged buyouts, restructurings, rescue financings and other special situation transactions. Brian has extensive experience negotiating transactions relating to renewable and conventional energy and commodities, infrastructure and related asset classes, and his practice includes a focus on structured transactions involving commodities and energy, including some of the market-leading transactions in the space.

Brian also negotiates equity investments and corporate transactions, including joint ventures, mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, co-investments and other corporate transactions.

Prior to joining Bracewell, Brian was a partner and co-chair of the debt finance practice at a national law firm in New York.
