

Securities Litigation

Our securities litigation team handles high-stakes securities matters and challenging “bet the company” cases. We are known for integrating a full range of skills across multiple areas of the law to develop efficient solutions to complex securities issues.

We represent public and private companies, underwriters and individuals in high-profile cases filed in both state and federal courts throughout the United States, including Delaware. We also defend companies, boards of directors, and individual executives and officers in actions alleging violations of securities laws at the state and federal levels.

Bracewell’s energy focus also extends to our securities litigation practice. Our litigation team works closely with our energy litigation lawyers to develop an inclusive approach to dispute resolution. We have represented Southern Copper Corporation, one of the world’s largest copper mining companies, in derivative suits, and Great Plains Energy Incorporated in connection with litigation surrounding its stock-for-stock merger of equals with Westar Energy. Our clients rely on our comprehensive strategies and interdisciplinary understanding to effectuate solutions that will have a positive and lasting impact.
