

Natural Resource Protection

Legislators, investors and the public have turned an intense spotlight on corporate strategies related to natural resources. Leading companies in energy, waste management, chemicals, technology and manufacturing have made sustainability initiatives and disclosures a priority.

Bracewell is “a top-tier firm, known for its environmental and energy expertise,” according to Chambers USA (2020). We have advised Equinor Wind on environmental and leasing issues related to its flagship offshore wind projects in the United States, as well as The Electric Reliability Coordinating Council on regulatory and legislative matters under various environmental statutes.

We help our energy and environmental clients align their strategies with government priorities and regulations with an array of integrated services, including policy development, regulatory counseling, corporate governance and internal audits, and disclosure issues around natural resources.
