

AtomicMind's Founder & CEO Leelila Strogov: An Education Entrepreneur's Success Through Storytelling

Podcast | Madam Policy

October 06, 2022 | 1 minute read

True equality lies in access to excellent education. That belief led entrepreneur and trailblazer Leelila Strogov to create her own education platform that helps students get into top colleges. On this week's episode of Madam Policy, hosts Dee Martin and Rebecca Brown sit down with Founder & CEO of AtomicMind, Leelila Strogov, to discuss the importance of celebrating children at every level, how collaboration is essential to successful education, and the importance of storytelling. An Emmy-nominated journalist and award-winning film creator, Leelila is keenly aware of the power of storytelling, and she shares her skills and craft with students to help them find and share their own stories during the admissions process.

What's her inspiration? Leelila talks about how the women and educators who helped her as a child inspired her to want to provide quality education to others. Tune in to hear how Leelila is revolutionizing the education technology world and why it is important not to judge children at a young age.

Also, stay tuned to hear about Leelila's first short film and what she has planned next!

Related People

E. Dee

Partner

WASHINGTON, DC

+1.202.828.5818

dee.martin@bracewell.com

Rebecca

Principal

WASHINGTON, DC

+1.202.828.1720

rebecca.brown@bracewell.com

Related Practices

Government Relations